Style and language

General

Currently, JMT can only accept manuscripts written in English. Spelling should be US English or British English, but not a mixture.

It is essential that submitted manuscripts have a high standard of written English. Manuscripts that are poorly written will be returned to authors for revision prior to peer review. Authors are advised to write clearly and simply, and to have their article checked by colleagues before submission. Non-native speakers of English may choose to make use of a copyediting service before submission. JMT will copy edit accepted manuscripts before they are published. The editing is designed only to correct such things as misused words, spelling errors, missing references or incomplete citation information.

Typography

Please use double line spacing.
Type the text unjustified, without hyphenating words at line breaks.
Abbreviations spelt out in full for the first time
Numerals from 1 to 10 spelt out
Numerals at the beginning of the sentence

Guidelines for Publishing a Hypothesis, Idea or Opinion

The submission letter and the title page will remain the same as mentioned in the guidelines to authors. The hypothesis will in addition have an Abstract, Keywords, Background, Hypothesis, Discussion, Clinical importance, Future direction, References. The abstract should consist of four parts; background of current knowledge on the subject, hypothesis derivation from the current knowledge and Clinical importance and Future Research. In the manuscript, background should provide detail of current literature and possible lacunae in literature. Hypothesis should include the details of the hypothesis, idea or modification in technique along with related positive and negative evidence. Here the authors can provide an index example case, or details of a pilot study done based on the hypothesis. Discussion should include the impact such hypothesis, or idea or technique will have on the current context of literature. Clinical importance should contain how the hypothesis will help improve the patient care and lastly future direction should provide a blue print on how the hypothesis should be approached for practically proving it and converting it into valid evidence. References should be number chronologically and in format with JMT guideline. We encourage you to provide figures and diagrams and even videos to help prove the point. All hypothesis, ideas or opinions will undergo stringent peer review and will take around 3-6 month to be published. Article processing charges do apply to these publications and are as per JMT guidelines. For any other query please write to us at journalmedicalthesis@gmail.com
